

The Burt Lake Golf Club (currently, the Indian River Golf Club) was founded in 1923 for the local Columbus Beach community as a private nine hole club for its membership. In 1924, the club commissioned acclaimed English golf course architect and championship golfer, Wilfrid E. Reid to design a course during a visit to Michigan to design Gaylord CC and Indianwood CC. This "new course" would replace the rudimentary course.

The course has seen several updates and most recently in 1984, the nine hole design was rerouted after additional land was acquired. The club brought in architect Warner Bowen to develop the course into 18 holes and its current championship design.

The membership of Indian River Golf Club opens its doors to the public and lets them enjoy this classic old style course.
